LETTER PROB VIRGINIA.

LEMBING, November 5, 1861. EDITORS APPEAL: In all probability th present will prove the last letter you may n ceive from this point, as circumstances lead me to suppose we fall back on Centerville, for reasons best known to the highest authorities. Every thing being quiet, the wounded and prisoner removed to safer situation, I have enjoyed several very interesting chit-chats with some of the circumstance, I have no doubt that their narration : but deducting much for time, place, and tions in the main are worthy of credence and ments, and from districts wide apart both in distonce, pramers, and opinion, I attach some credit to their expressions, since in very many instances, persons, places, and things speken of are not totally unknown to me.

"I enlisted in July," said one, "and have been incessantly drilling since, but often wisher I was out of it. Trade being totally stopped most of us had no employment, and to keep rom starvation was the main motive. We always heard you spoken of as a "handful of wilels, without arms, and principle, who wer taling some districts by force, and our papers confirmally reported that the great mass of the people layed the "stars and stripes as much as we, and only wanted us to come across the rive when thousands would join us. To read the Boston papers daily sent us, any one would supposs we were hadly whipping you in some qual ter or other every day. But I always had a suspicion, judging from the boldness and bear ing of your rebels, that such reports were fabri cations. We have been in the service six months, and have received but about twenty dellars—the rest always being 'promised.' I entered the servicce to support my wife and child," (said he with filling eyes), "but I have not been able to do so from their inhuman treatment." They all speak in harsh terms of their treatment from the authorities at Washington, and seem glad to have shirked the yoke of the Lincoln dynasty

"Well, by jabers," said an Irishman of the 20th Massachusetts, "tis no use of talling at all: for the Lincoln erators, bad luck to em made us believe everything, yet they didn't give us our 'regulars' nor pay, neither; and herin I, the father of two childer, and my right to knocked out; had cess to them say I, and -pery the day I ever put a blue coat upon my lack to serve them!" -Well, I did try to find out how things wen before I joined, but the newspapers so mystified matters that I unconscientionally believed as then sands did, and joined to defend Washington, he nothing more. Our great men did much talkkinding,-big meetings were held, and there was lots artial about the flag of our country, and when many joined and I did, but would have en their fingers to have been out of it after ten to a g trial, for our officers began treating us some he like convicts." the allegator sorry to be a prisoner," said a Meth quister, and a soldier, slightly wounded bre. be sorry my wife and little ones are ly us and of the zone state of things, and from put I shed reports would never believe we are trenteor we really are with bindness and every attention Indeed, sig in Philadelphia, the most revolting stories are told of your barbarities our wounded and prisoners, while on the contrary I find they were all cruel lies to stir up that rescutment in the northern breast, while would never have otherwise existed: for I be loos were the true state of facts and things known to them, they would not hesitate to recognize you, and rid themselves of all uneasiness and trouble. Now, sir, if even I were to write I fear it would full into hands that wonly horn my letters, so inquisitorial are regulation with the military." . I am glad to have escape but perhaps I ought to be ashamed confess it, but I don't see why I should either—they fooled me-and I tooled them? Yes, and there are hundreds would do the same, i they only had the chance, you see if the den't. Do you think all them prisoners you got did at want to be taken! They aint fools: They did'nt receive any harm from the South m more than most warn't going to have my thron out for Lincoln nor more of 'em, but thought is incky, when your boys cut us off from the river as a made things look kinder right. I want to are the South any how and shall have lots of claims going the same way, -726, I hear, al : sid, officers and all!

"Yes, it can't be denied," said an office there is much suffering and privation in the North-which helps to keep up the army-bu then I hear it is the same with you-at least our papers are unanimous in that opinion, and in combaelly they have greater proof of it than those at the war. And it can't be doubted but that Sup. this coming winter will try both sides very so versity, and particularly you; for your resource a e limited, and your ports shut by the flee while your finances can't long hold out. I d not think I would enter the army again, as I am ock and fired of it. We expect great things from McClellan, and as he will commence open tions soon. I may return home sooner than ex pected. I confess that affairs look different to what I expected, but as there is fault on both sides, I think things will be amicably settled in a few months."

"Yes, I would enlist again," said a consump rive-looking youth; "the South is wrong, and must be brought to her senses, and I am ashamed of those who would say differently. I am no erayen, if I am s prisoner!"

"Your officers and men are different-you collitical leaders lead you out to fight, but owrs stay at home and make hig speeches, and all that. I shought it fine sport soldiering in the streets of the East, with bands of music, and lots of funbut things change mightily after one leaves home. They don't seem to care for as much, when we are on the Potomac, shivering, with no pay, and hard words. Heigho? I wish I was at home-I would see the stars and stripes and all such gammon to Halifax before I'd shouldanother musket, for the South never barmed me. When told the names, congressional or social Same of some captains—the wealth and sacrific of others, etc., and when they saw these same modest gentlemen sharing the crust and cantee with them, some of the prisoners stopped eating. and looked incredulous; but as they proceeded on their night mucch to Manassus, and received every kindness that circumstances would permit they began one and all to feel free and easy, and were loud in their praises of the gentlemanty bearing and serupulous civility of both comters and men. In fact, I know a rich plan ter who "rode double" with a negro, esptured with the Massachusetta 20th, whose strength was unequal to the march to Centerville. Others produced as many horses as possible for the commeasured officers, who took it turn and turn about with the privates; but the difference in "casts" of officers and usen was particularly noticeable, and almost as strictly adhered no and enforced as on plantations by the whites and blacks; while the sociability and equality shown in our officers and men, seemed a matter of much private chat, particularly when ; leaked out on the march how well known some tod made themselves in war politics or litera-ture. Our guards had very little to say, but were kind and polite, while I firmly believe no unkind or wounding word escaped the lips of any who had them in charge; for, chivalric like, they never laugh at a fallen for Of letters found on the field I have seen sereral, whose contents and diction were very sousing and would amply repay publication, but the manis for relies seems to nie so barbaric in its nature I refrain from transcribing or send ing them to you, for you have "matter" o greater interest to the South to fill your columns than pander in long paragraphs to enriesity mongers or sensation " item-paters." Suffice it to say then that the tenor of most was rather of a distressing character.
